The new zero-emissions road vehicle is part of GE's hydrogen fuel cell vehicle program, in partnership with Canadian bus manufacturer, New Flyer Industries. Called "GENx X2" it has a range of about 200 miles and can deliver its passengers and drivers to their destinations safely and quickly. "The GENx X2 fuel cell-powered bus is a world first," said David Samson, Chairman and CEO of GE. "This bus is a step forward in GE's mission of turning hydrogen into a fuel. With the continued work of the GE Advanced Energy & Infrastructure teams, and those across GE, we are helping deliver affordable clean energy solutions for the many millions of people around the globe that need them." According to the city of Toronto, the first zero emission vehicle journey of the new GENx X2 is the first time that a heavy 3e33713323
