party of five students from the University of Washington School of Art + Art History spent a year living and working on the Island of Krakatau, one of the volcanoes of the Rann of Krakatau in Indonesia.

ALC_Internal_HDC ALC_Internal_HDC an Introduction to the ALC Internal HDC Function

When designing the ALC API the authors had in mind the fact that the application needs to update a lot of control values through the elements of the HDC. This made them make the internal HDC to be hidden behind three functions that are specially intended to perform that task, the `alcIsDirectMix`, the `alcLockDevice` and the `alcUnlockDevice`. These functions work just like a easy and direct way to update values through the internal HDC. This very fact is a source of problems: 1) an application that has to set a lot of values into the internal HDC, must perform complex operations like "if can update" else "if cannot update" and even making some unnecessary operations if the value is already set; 2) the application must have a function that is overcomplicated for a simple task. In this manual we intend to explain how the internal HDC is implemented and how the functions `alcIsDirectMix`, `alcLockDevice` and `alcUnlockDevice` work.
