When you hear Photoshop referred to as an "editor," think of the way you create or manipulate your edits. For example, you create an image and add a graphic element that becomes part of the photo. In this case, you are editing the graphic. To get a grip on the fundamentals of Photoshop, imagine that a folder is your canvas and all that you do to create a new image is to place and position the elements you want in that folder. You need an image, a background, a tool, and your photo (or graphic). Oh, and of course you have to have the right software and know how to use it. Photoshop is the most widely used photo-editing software because it offers so many options and features. It works on most images and even on graphics. The programs that come with the software are Elements and Photoshop Elements. They provide a good basis for beginners and offer features and options that give you plenty of room to experiment. Although Photoshop's version costs about twice as much as Elements ($699 and $499, respectively), you get a better-looking, more complex application. If you want to edit images in other programs and move them into Photoshop, you can do so through an image-editing application's file exchange. This section gives you the basics on using Photoshop. Photoshop is a powerful tool for photographers and designers. You can use the program for all types of tasks, such as creating new images from old ones, retouching existing work, improving quality, enhancing creativity, designing Web graphics, or even improving the quality of your promotional material.

The soccer game between Serbia and Portugal is postponed on Sunday, meaning the Portuguese will go to the World Cup on June 14 with a win. A win, but in truth Portugal has been relegated from the last 16 already with a draw in Paris, and with that Italy and Brazil have clinched their places. But the point is not the most important thing for Portugal at this point in time, and it's not about the World Cup itself. The point is that Ronaldo has arrived. Ronaldo knows he's come from a tough competition, but he believes he's got what it takes to beat any challenge. "I think it's important that I arrived here," said Ronaldo. "I'm here for personal reasons and also for the national team. I'm going to try to help the team progress even further. I'm going to try to be positive and help my teammates. I think we are ready and feel confident. If we play as we did in the last game, we have a great chance to win. It is a really important result." The Colombia game was a similar scenario for the Brazilian. Brazil has been a very good year so far – winning nine of their 13 friendlies, but also losing against Chile, Greece and Peru. But it's not about where Brazil is at the moment. The Brazilians could have been eliminated easily if the other teams got to a set number of points on March 11. But they're not, and instead if they come out with a result like they did in Spain, they can still qualify for the World Cup. "We want to win. We are going to try to win, that's the most important thing," said a very calm Thiago Silva, who had an assist in that game. He's the last man to admit to not wanting the Brazilians to qualify, but he's a nice human being in that sense, but he doesn't want to go to the World Cup without finishing the job. "I want to play in the World Cup, but we want the world to go to the World Cup. And that's what we are going to do," Silva said. The Denmark game was the big game for Ronaldo and company. There were nerves before the game, and the Portuguese players were under some pressure to perform

Q: $(e^x - x^e) = \sum_{k=0}^{\infty} \frac{x^k}{k!}$ How to express the following series in terms of known functions: $(e^x - x^e) = \sum_{k=0}^{\infty} \frac{x^k}{k!}$ A: Hint:

$e^x - x^e = \sum_{k=0}^n \frac{x^k}{k!} + \sum_{k=n+1}^{\infty} \frac{x^k}{k!}$ Replace n by $n+1$ in the first part. Q: Synchronization on a specific enumerator I need to synchronize on a property from a pool of widgets. Widgets have the following state: Widget(bool hasChanged, WidgetId id, Widget value) Notice that "hasChanged" is only one of the two fields. Widgets are added to the pool in a thread, and then some later point I need to update the widgets whose "hasChanged" field is set to true. I know what to do for updating widgets whose "hasChanged" field is set to false - a sync block will lock on the "id" field. But what if I need to update widgets whose "hasChanged" field is set to true, and "id" fields are null? I do not want to use lock(this) when another thread might be setting the id fields. Right now I am using lock(getMatchingIds(id.id, true)) which is horribly inefficient. It would seem like a nice problem to have some smart utility method available to do this. A: If you're worried about the scenarios where nulls are valid in your hasChanged field (and it seems that you are), you could make the following fields: private readonly HashSet _ids = new HashSet(); private bool _hasChanged; You can then lock on _ids and use Interlocked.CompareExchange to insert id, change it to true and set it to id if it was different from _ids.
