How to use python to get the name of all the rows where the row number is greater than 1000. A: You can get the names of the rows with those number greater than 1000 with: import MySQLdb as mdb conn = mdb.connect(host='localhost', user='dbuser', passwd='dbpass', db='dbname') cursor = conn.cursor() cursor.execute("SELECT * FROM table_name WHERE ID > 1000") rows = cursor.fetchall() Then you can iterate over the rows to find the name: for row in rows: name = row[1] # do whatever you want with name Virginia congressional race shines light on climate change Virginians told a congressional race that never mattered much until very recently that they care about global warming. In a race that's still too close to call, Republican Barbara Comstock, a former Washington-area lawyer, has been losing the argument that global warming is a hoax. She has been out-spending her Democratic opponent, Mark Takano, a former congressional staffer, on TV advertising that criticizes Takano for supporting the 2009 international climate accord, better known as the Copenhagen Accord, that failed to achieve reductions in carbon dioxide emissions. Takano is trying to convince the voters that he supports clean energy sources such as wind and solar, and by extension, he says, a comprehensive energy policy that includes nuclear, coal and hydro power. Whether Takano can articulate this vision effectively enough to overcome strong skepticism among Republican voters is the question that will decide the outcome of the closely watched race. Comstock, however, has the resources and the laser-like focus on the issue. In addition to the $1.5 million she has raised in the past two months, she has the financial advantage of a strong grass-roots support network, much of which
