vyprvpn has no such problems, as it has a whopping 1,000+ servers across 63 countries. although a vpn for torrenting isn't a necessity, it is a far more desirable feature, and vyprvpn certainly provides it. vyprvpn - the best vpn for torrenting. even if you don't need to download anything yourself whilst using vyprvpn, there are no extra fees or hidden charges. the service is exceptionally easy to use, with dedicated p2p connections, excellent speeds, and a kill-switch to prevent sensitive data being leaked. cyberghost vpn. their software is very simple to use and reliable. it is not the most advanced p2p protocol out there, but is better than most. there are 2gb traffic limits per device, and you can only connect once a day. cyberghost vpn has one of the largest numbers of servers available, and they all run the same client, so you'll always connect to the same server no matter which device you're using. you'll need to download the app for the relevant platform, which is pretty straightforward, though you'll only be able to connect once a day, and it'll cost you $4.95 per month (charged monthly) or $48.99 annually. the app is easy to use, and if you decide to cancel the service you'll be given a full refund. they offer a lot of useful features, though we'd prefer to see more p2p connections for free. i'm particularly impressed by private internet access' no-logs policy and complete app support for ios and android devices. nordvpn and expressvpn have similar policies, and the vyprvpn app is also terrific. however, one thing that's less well-supported is the split tunneling feature which nordvpn, expressvpn, and most other providers don't bother with. there's really no need to make use of it and i'm sure a lot of folks would be happy if pia offered split tunneling as an optional feature. they've all been making strides recently in this regard, so there's never been a better time to switch.

if you're looking for a speedy and secure vpn that'll sort out your torrenting woes, then i'd recommend jumping on the private internet access bandwagon. full stealth mode and a no-logs policy ensure that your activities are hidden from those who'd like to keep tabs on you online, and, when you do wish to make your activity public, pia will provide multiple options for this. it also offers both ipv4 and ipv6 connectivity, making it easy to keep your torrenting hidden from one generation to the next. pia seems to be doing a good job of keeping up with the evolving torrenting landscape, too. upgrading your service is relatively painless, and if it's not broken, you can expect pia to stay online well into the future. even if it has gone kaput, the service is open source which means you'll always be able to download the latest builds and run their pia client yourself. with secure, p2p optimized servers, a dedicated ios and android app, unlimited bandwidth, a 30-day money-back guarantee, and a us-based customer support team, surfshark (aff) is the king of torrenting vpns and does not disappoint. the service's dedicated torrenting servers help you to be seamlessly anonymous on both tcp and udp connections, meaning you can get on with downloading without having to worry about vulnerabilities (such as dns leaks or ip leaks) plaguing your connection. in addition, i appreciate surfshark's decision to allow its customers to get free tickets for nbc's popular comedy saturday night live (although, personally, i'd recommend avoiding this as every ticket is a lottery). although surfshark uses the openvpn protocol, it does also support ikev2 and wireguard protocols, which seems a bit redundant but is still a nice option to have. another thing that stands out is the service's choice to make its servers ipv6-only. i personally think this is a good option for any p2p user as it means you're able to connect to content that's only available over ipv6. 5ec8ef588b
